was on trial, was shot in his store at Fiftyout to the voters at night.

It is the hope of the Harrisonites they will find the halls so packed by Sullivanites that they will be unable even to project their voices through the doorways. They do not want to get inside. They merely want to per-fect their " record " and be able to show that they tried to attend the conventions and could

If they cannot get inside they will about face and march back to their own meeting places, where they will hold conventions of their own and elect state delegates of their own. If they can get inside they will wait until some high handed outrage has been committed, until they have been denied the right of free speech, or the right to vote, or until they have been thrown out into outer darkness.

When this happens they will return in a perfectly happy frame of mind to their own places of assemblage and then proceed to elect contesting delegates.

Two Delegations Are Certain.

Their plan makes it certain that there will be two contesting delegations from every ward in Chicago. They are not looking for fair play in the regularly called conventions. They don't want it. They want to be abused. denied their rights, and thrown out. They want ground for a contest before the credentials committee of the state convention in Springfield.

When demograts meet in this frame of mind the results are apt to be uncertain. The protestants may be merely shooed away or their separation from the regulars may be brought about in other ways. In one or two wards the probabilities point to other ways.

Reports given to the Harrisonites at their meeting indicate that in many cases the hope that the protestants will not be able to get inside the halls will be fulfilled. One Harrisoner, speaking for the Twenty-seventh ward, gave it as his conservative estimate that the meeting place selected for this "mass convention" might hold a hundred men if it ware hard pushed.

As Edgar L. Masters says, "this is going it too raw."

Makes List in Sullivan's Office.

The Harrisoners also learned that George Brennan had been seen in Roger Sullivan's office carefully preparing a list of the delegates who are to be elected in the different wards. He is alleged to have been discovered taking the names of the delegates to the Peoria convention from a book, striking out those of men who have died, moved out of town, or out of politics, and substituting for them the names of other men who can be depended on as equally trustworthy as were the Peoria delegates when Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Bryan had a difference of opinion regarding Mr. Sullivan's availability as a naional committeeman Johnson Talks of Campaign.

Gov. John A. Johnson was in Chicago in the morning on his way south and discussed his presidential candidacy briefly. He said that he gladly would support Bryan if the latter were nominated, and that his own candidacy was not hostile to the Nebraskan. " It is merely a question of availability," he said. "My friends are conducting my campaign with a view to spreading such information as will enable the democrats to judge of my own availability."
